Introduction

The Republic of Ireland is a country occupying the greater part of the island of Ireland, which is situated in the North Atlantic Ocean, to the west of Great Britain. The Republic of Ireland (Ireland) has an estimated population of 4.9 million.¹ It is a unitary, constitutional republic with a parliamentary democracy and has a common-law legal system.

FGM Prevalence

The most recent estimation on the prevalence of female genital mutilation (FGM) in Ireland is from 2017, by the Irish non-governmental organisation AkiDwA. AkiDwA estimates that, based on data collected by the Irish Central Statistics Office, approximately 5,790 women and girls who have undergone FGM are living in Ireland.² Earlier studies published in 2008 and 2010 estimated the number to be 2,585 and 3,170, respectively.³

National Legal Framework

Specific Law

Ireland has a specific law criminalising FGM, the Criminal Justice (Female Genital Mutilation) Act 2012, as amended (the FGM Act).

Definition of FGM

Section 1 of the FGM Act defines 'FGM' as any act the purpose of which, or the effect of which, is the excision, infibulation or other mutilation of the whole or any part of the labia majora, labia minora, prepuce of the clitoris, clitoris or vagina of a girl or woman. This definition would likely cover most, if not all, types of FGM. The definition is in line with that given by the World Health Organization, but does differ slightly, omitting 'other types of injuries for non-medical reasons'.⁴

The FGM Act does not further define the terms 'excising', 'infibulating' or 'otherwise mutilating'. To date, there is little to no judicial consideration of these terms. Whether a particular procedure amounts to excision, infibulation or mutilation of the genitalia would be a question of fact, which would need to be established by medical and/or other expert evidence.

Women and Girls of All Ages

The performance of, or an attempt to perform, FGM on women and girls of all ages has been criminalised in Ireland. However, Section 2(2)(d) of the FGM Act prescribes that it is not a criminal offence to perform or attempt to perform FGM on a woman aged 18 or older if there is no resulting permanent bodily harm. However, the FGM Act does not define what would or not constitute 'permanent bodily harm', making this exception seemingly inappropriate and adding unnecessarily complexity.

Section 2(3) states that carrying out or attempting to carry out FGM is an offence irrespective of the consent of the girl or woman concerned, her parents or her guardian.

Additionally, any offences committed under Sections 2, 3 and 4 are specifically designated 'offences against children' under the Children Act 2001, as amended (the Children Act).

Procuring, Aiding and Abetting

Procuring, aiding and abetting FGM are criminalised in Ireland through general criminal law. Section 7(1) of the Criminal Law Act 1997 (the Criminal Law Act) prescribes that any person who aids, abets, counsels or procures the commission of an indictable offence shall be liable to punishment as a principal offender.

Allowing the Use of Premises

Allowing the use of premises for the purpose of FGM is not specifically criminalised in Ireland. Although it is not mentioned specifically in the FGM Act, allowing the use of premises could be a form of 'aiding' under Section 7(1) of the Criminal Law Act.

Providing or Possessing Tools

Providing or possessing tools for the purpose of FGM is not specifically criminalised in Ireland. Although it is not mentioned specifically in the FGM Act, providing tools, specific or otherwise, used for the purposes of carrying out an act of FGM could be a form of 'aiding' under Section 7(1) of the Criminal Law Act, although simply possessing tools is unlikely to qualify as an 'attempt'.

Failure to Report FGM

Failing to report FGM constitutes an offence in Ireland, but only if the victim is a child under the age of 18. Section 2(1) of the Criminal Justice (Withholding of Information on Offences Against Children and Vulnerable Persons) Act 2012 prescribes that it is an offence if:

- a person knows or believes that a certain offence, including (inter alia) FGM, has been committed by another person against a child; and
- the person has information that might be of assistance in the apprehension, prosecution or conviction of that other person; and
- the person fails without reasonable excuse to disclose the information to the authorities as soon as possible.

Under general child protection laws, certain professionals have a duty to report any actual or suspected case of FGM. Section 14(1) of the Children First Act 2015 obligates 'mandated persons' to notify the Child and Family Agency if they know, believe or have reasonable grounds to suspect that a child has been harmed, is being harmed or is at risk of being harmed, based on information they have received, acquired or been made aware of during the course of their professional activities. Section 2 of Schedule 2 of the Children First Act prescribes that 'mandated persons' include, inter alia, medical professionals (practitioners, midwives, nurses, etc), social workers and teachers.

Medicalised FGM

Medicalised FGM is not specifically criminalised in Ireland, but would fall under the general prohibition in Section 2(1) of the FGM Act.

Section 2(2) contains two medical exceptions to acts that might otherwise constitute offences of FGM.

- Under Section 2(2)(a), a surgical operation performed by a registered medical practitioner that is necessary for the protection of the physical or mental health of the woman or girl is not considered an offence of FGM.
- Under Section 2(2)(b), a surgical operation performed by a registered medical practitioner or a midwife, or a person undergoing training to be a midwife, on the girl or woman concerned when she is in any stage of labour or has just given birth, for purposes connected with the labour or birth, is not considered an offence of FGM.

Extraterritoriality

The FGM Act has extraterritorial application and extends to any act constituting FGM committed outside the territory of Ireland under the requirement of double criminality. It explicitly criminalises the removal of any girl or woman outside of Ireland for the purpose of committing an act of FGM on her.

Section 4(1)(c) prescribes that it is an offence to perform or attempt to perform an act of FGM outside of Ireland if done by a person who has Irish nationality or is ordinarily resident in Ireland and if FGM is also a criminal offence in the country where it was committed or attempted. Under Section 4(2)(d), it is not an offence if the victim is 18 years of age or older and no permanent bodily harm has ensued.

Section 3(1) criminalises the removal of any girl or woman outside the national borders of Ireland for the purpose of carrying out an act of FGM. This section prescribes that it is an offence to take or attempt to take a woman or girl out of Ireland with the purpose of performing an act of FGM on her. Under Section 3(2)(c), it is not an offence if the victim is 18 years of age or older and no permanent bodily harm has ensued.

Under Section 3(3), it is presumed that a woman or girl was taken or attempted to be taken out of Ireland for the purpose of having an act of FGM performed on her if the circumstances of the case give rise to the reasonable inference that one of the purposes for such removal was having FGM performed on her, or if FGM was performed on her after being removed from Ireland and before her subsequent return to Ireland.

Section 3(5) elaborates that to 'remove a girl or woman from Ireland' includes:

- arranging any part of her travel out of Ireland;
- accompanying her for any portion of that travel;
- arranging that she be met when her travel out of Ireland has ended; or
- doing any other act that could facilitate her travel out of Ireland.

Penalties

Section 5 of the FGM Act prescribes that any person who is guilty of an offence under Sections 2, 3 and 4 of the FGM Act shall be liable for a sentence of:

- up to 14 years' imprisonment or a fine, or both, on conviction on indictment (more severe offences); and
- up to one year's imprisonment or a fine, or both, on summary conviction (less severe offences; for example, a less severe form of FGM).

Under Section 7(1) of the Criminal Law Act, those who procure, counsel aid in and/or abet an indictable offence are liable to those same sentences as principle offenders, so any persons who procure, counsel, aid in and/or abet an act or attempted act of FGM and who are deemed indictable on prosecution will be liable to up to 14 years' imprisonment or a fine, or both, on conviction.

Protection

Protecting Uncut Girls and Women

Uncut girls under the age of 18 can be protected through the child protection legislation. There are no specific or general laws protecting uncut women over the age of 18, aside from the general criminal legislative provisions.

Supervision Orders

Under the Child Care Act 1991, as amended (the Child Care Act), a child can be put under supervision or be taken into care by court order. Section 19(1)(c) of the Child Care Act prescribes that a court may make a 'supervision order', on the application of the Child and Family Agency,¹ if there are reasonable grounds for believing that the child's health, development or welfare is likely to be avoidably impaired or neglected and it is desirable that the child is visited periodically by or on behalf of the health board.

Section 19(2) prescribes that a supervision order authorises the Child and Family Agency to have the child visited on such periodic occasions as the agency may consider necessary in order to guarantee the welfare of the child and give the necessary advice to the parents.

When making a supervision order, and throughout the subsequent duration of such order, a court may, on application by the Child and Family Agency, give direction regarding the care of the child, such as requiring the parents to guarantee that the child attends a medical examination or assessment (Section 19(4)).

Section 19(5) prescribes that not complying with the terms and directions of a supervision order is an offence, the sentence for which is a fine or, at the direction of the court, up to six months' imprisonment, or both, on summary conviction.

Care Orders

A court may also order a child to be taken into care. The granting of a care order is independent of a supervision order and may be granted immediately upon application if the court deems such an order necessary. Section 18(1)(c) of the Child Care Act prescribes that a court may make a 'care order', on application by the Child and Family Agency, if the child's health, development or welfare is likely to be avoidably impaired or neglected and the child requires care or protection that the child is unlikely to receive unless the court makes an order.

¹ Tusla – the Child and Family Agency – established under the Child and Family Act 2013, as amended, is the dedicated state agency responsible for the wellbeing, health and protection of children in the Republic of Ireland.

Under Section 18(2), a care order's duration is up to the discretion of the court and may last until the child's 18th birthday. Section 18(6) prescribes that, between the application for and the decision on a care order, the court may give directions regarding the care and custody of the child or make a supervision order.

Interim Care Orders

Under Section 17(1) of the Child Care Act, pending the decision on or application for a care order, a justice of a district court may also make an 'interim care order' if deemed necessary to protect the child. If the parents, guardian acting in loco parentis or the Child and Family Agency having custody of the child do not consent to such order, an interim care order may not last longer than 29 days.

Emergency Care Orders

Section 13(1) prescribes that, in the case of an immediate and serious risk to the health or welfare of a child or the imminent likelihood of such a risk, a justice may make an 'emergency care order', on the application of the Child and Family Agency, for the child to be taken into the care of the Child and Family Agency for a maximum period of eight days (a court direction may, however, be given at any time during the currency of the order and may be varied or discharged on the application of any person). If there is no time to make an application, the police may take the child into protection under Section 12(1).

Victims and Witnesses

Victims and witnesses enjoy protection from publicity in Ireland under the FGM Act. Section 8(1) prescribes that FGM court cases are not to be held in public, excluding the presence of any persons directly concerned in the proceedings, such as officers of the court, bona fide representatives of the Press and such other persons (if any) as the judge or the court, as the case may be, may in his or her or its discretion permit to attend.

Section 9 protects the anonymity of the victim. Section 9(1) prescribes that nothing may be published or broadcast that may lead the public to identify the girl or woman against whom the alleged offence has been committed, except in situations where the court gives directions for doing so. Section 9(6) prescribes that a breach of Section 9(1) constitutes an offence.

Implementation of the Law

Court Cases

There has been one conviction for FGM in Ireland to date. On 27 January 2020, the Dublin Circuit Criminal Court sentenced a married man and woman, both originating from East Africa, to (respectively) five years and six months' imprisonment, and four years and nine months' imprisonment for procuring FGM performed on their daughter in 2016, who was just under two years of age at the time.

The performance of FGM on the girl took place in Ireland. The victim was brought to hospital due to excessive bleeding, where the parents told hospital staff that she had sustained her injuries by falling backwards on a toy without a diaper on. The girl had to undergo surgery to stop the excessive bleeding from the injuries sustained. The treating doctors and surgeon observed that her clitoris had been partially removed, amounting to FGM Type I, and formed the view that the explanation given by the girl's parents was not credible and the injuries were not accidental, whereupon they duly notified the authorities.

The parents pleaded not guilty in court and denied that FGM had been carried out on their daughter, but this was not accepted by the jury, which returned a unanimous verdict of guilty on all counts.⁵

Conclusions and Recommendations

Conclusions

FGM is criminalised in Ireland under a specific law, the Criminal Justice (Female Genital Mutilation) Act 2012, as amended (the FGM Act). The definition of 'FGM' maintained in the law seems to cover all types of FGM and is in line with the World Health Organization's definition; however, it omits the criterion of FGM being performed for non-medical reasons. Medicalised FGM is not specifically addressed, but is likely to be covered by the general prohibition of Section 2(1) of the FGM Act.

Procuring, aiding and abetting FGM is not specifically criminalised in Ireland, but providing tools could qualify as 'aiding'.

The failure to report FGM is criminalised in Ireland, but only if the victim is a minor. Under general child protection laws, there is an obligation for relevant professionals to report cases of FGM and cases where a girl is at risk of it.

The FGM Act extends extraterritorial application to FGM committed abroad, under the requirement of double criminality, and explicitly criminalises cross-border movement for the purpose of FGM.

Recommendations

We recommend that Ireland also criminalise performing FGM on a woman who is 18 years of age or older even if there is no permanent bodily harm resulting from it.

We also recommend that Ireland order an inquiry into the prevalence of FGM and the number of girls and women possibly at risk of it.

Section 1

“female genital mutilation” means any act the purpose of which, or the effect of which, is the excision, infibulation or other mutilation of the whole or any part of the labia majora, labia minora, prepuce of the clitoris, clitoris or vagina of a girl or woman;

“midwife” means a person whose name is registered in the midwives division of the register of nurses established under section 27 of the Nurses Act 1985;

“registered medical practitioner” has the same meaning as it has in section 2 of the Medical Practitioners Act 2007.

Section 2

- (1) A person is guilty of an offence if the person does or attempts to do an act of female genital mutilation.
- (2) A person is not guilty of an offence under subsection (1) if—
 - (a) the act concerned is a surgical operation performed by a registered medical practitioner on the girl or woman concerned, which is necessary for the protection of her physical or mental health,
 - (b) the act concerned is a surgical operation performed by a registered medical practitioner or a midwife, or a person undergoing training to be a midwife, on the girl or woman concerned when she is in any stage of labour, or has just given birth, for purposes connected with the labour or birth,
 - (c) the person is the girl or woman on whom the act of female genital mutilation is done, or
 - (d) the act concerned is done to a woman who is not less than 18 years of age and there is no resultant permanent bodily harm.
- (3) For the avoidance of doubt, it is hereby declared that it shall not be a defence to proceedings for an offence under this section for the accused person to show that he or she believed that the act concerned was consented to by the girl concerned or her parents or guardian, or the woman concerned, as the case may be, or required or permitted for customary or ritual reasons.

Section 3

- (1) A person is guilty of an offence if the person removes or attempts to remove a girl or woman from the State where one of the purposes for the removal is to have an act of female genital mutilation done to her.
- (2) A person is not guilty of an offence under subsection (1) if the act is done and is—
 - (a) a surgical operation performed, by a person who is duly qualified to perform surgical operations under the law of the place where the act is done, or has been professionally trained to perform surgical operations, on the girl or woman concerned, which is necessary for the protection of her physical or mental health,
 - (b) a surgical operation performed, by a person performing functions corresponding to those of a midwife or a registered medical practitioner, on the girl or woman concerned when she is in any stage of labour, or has just given birth, for purposes connected with the labour or birth, or
 - (c) done to a woman who is not less than 18 years of age, and there is no resultant permanent bodily harm.
- (3) In proceedings for an offence under subsection (1), it shall be presumed, until the contrary is shown, that one of the purposes for the removal from the State by the accused person of the girl or woman concerned was to have an act of female genital mutilation done to her if—

- (a) the accused person removed the girl or woman from the State in circumstances giving rise to the reasonable inference that one of the purposes for such removal was to have an act of female genital mutilation done to her, and
 - (b) an act of female genital mutilation was done to her after she was removed from the State and, where she subsequently returned to the State, before that return.
- (4) For the avoidance of doubt, it is hereby declared that it shall not be a defence to proceedings for an offence under this section for the accused person to show that he or she believed that the act concerned was consented to by the girl concerned or her parents or guardian, or the woman concerned, as the case may be, or required or permitted for customary or ritual reasons.
- (5) For the purposes of this section, to “remove a girl or woman from the State” includes—
- (a) arranging any part of her travel out of the State,
 - (b) accompanying her for any portion of that travel,
 - (c) arranging that she be met when her travel out of the State has terminated, or
 - (d) doing any other act that could facilitate her travel out of the State.

Section 4

- (1) A person is guilty of an offence if the person does or attempts to do an act of female genital mutilation in a place other than the State, but only if it is done or attempted to be done—
- (a) on board an Irish ship within the meaning of section 9 of the Mercantile Marine Act 1955 ,
 - (b) on an aircraft registered in the State, or
 - (c) by a person who is a citizen of Ireland or is ordinarily resident in the State, and would constitute an offence in the place in which it is done.
- (2) A person is not guilty of an offence under subsection (1) if—
- (a) the act concerned is a surgical operation performed, by a person who is duly qualified to perform surgical operations under the law of the place where the act is done, or has been professionally trained to perform surgical operations, on the girl or woman concerned, which is necessary for the protection of her physical or mental health,
 - (b) the act concerned is a surgical operation performed, by a person performing functions corresponding to those of a midwife or a registered medical practitioner, on the girl or woman concerned when she is in any stage of labour, or has just given birth, for purposes connected with the labour or birth,
 - (c) the person is the girl or woman on whom the act of female genital mutilation is done, or
 - (d) the act concerned is done to a woman who is not less than 18 years of age and there is no resultant permanent bodily harm.
- (3) For the avoidance of doubt, it is hereby declared that it shall not be a defence to proceedings for an offence under this section for the accused person to show that he or she believed that the act concerned was consented to by the girl concerned or her parents or guardian, or the woman concerned, as the case may be, or required or permitted for customary or ritual reasons.
- (4) For the purposes of proceedings for an offence under this section, a person shall be deemed to be ordinarily resident in the State if he or she has had his or her principal residence within the State for the period of 12 months immediately preceding the alleged commission of the offence.
- (5) Proceedings for an offence under this section may be taken in any place in the State and the offence may for all incidental purposes be treated as having been committed in that place.

Section 5

A person who is guilty of an offence under section 2, 3 or 4 is liable—

- (a) on summary conviction to a class A fine or to imprisonment for a term not exceeding 12 months or to both, and
- (b) on conviction on indictment to a fine or imprisonment for a term not exceeding 14 years or to both.

Section 8

- (1) Subject to subsections (2) and (3), in any proceedings for an offence under section 2, 3 or 4, the judge or the court, as the case may be, shall exclude from the court during the hearing all persons except officers of the court, persons directly concerned in the proceedings, bona fide representatives of the Press and such other persons (if any) as the judge or the court, as the case may be, may in his or her or its discretion permit to remain.
- (2) Subsection (1) is without prejudice to the right of a parent, relative or friend of the girl or woman in respect of whom the offence is alleged to have been committed or, where the accused person is not of full age, of the accused person, to remain in court.
- (3) In any proceedings to which subsection (1) applies, the verdict or decision and the sentence (if any) shall be announced in public.

Section 9

- (1) Subject to subsection (8)(a), after a person is charged with an offence under this Act, no matter likely to lead members of the public to identify a girl or woman as the girl or woman in respect of whom the offence is alleged to have been committed shall be published in a written publication available to the public or be broadcast except as authorised by a direction given in pursuance of this section.

- (2) If, at any stage before the commencement of a trial of a person for an offence under this Act, the accused person or another person against whom the girl or woman concerned may be expected to give evidence at the trial applies to a judge of the High Court or Circuit Court for a direction in pursuance of this subsection and satisfies the judge—
 - (a) that the direction is required for the purpose of inducing persons to come forward who are likely to be needed as witnesses at the trial, and
 - (b) that the conduct of the applicant's defence at the trial is likely to be adversely affected if the direction is not given, the judge shall direct that subsection (1) shall not, by virtue of the charge alleging the offence, apply to such matter relating to that girl or woman as is specified in the direction.

- (3) If, at a trial of a person for an offence under this Act, the accused or another person who is also charged at the trial applies to the judge for a direction in pursuance of this subsection and satisfies the judge—
 - (a) that the direction is required for the purpose of inducing persons to come forward who are likely to be needed as witnesses at the trial,
 - (b) that the conduct of the applicant's defence at the trial is likely to be adversely affected if the direction is not given, and
 - (c) that there was good reason for the applicant's not having made an application under subsection (2) before the commencement of the trial,

the judge shall direct that subsection (1) shall not, by virtue of the charge alleging the offence, apply to such matter relating to the girl or woman concerned as is specified in the direction.

- (4) If, at a trial for an offence under this Act, the judge is satisfied that the effect of subsection (1) is to impose a substantial and unreasonable restriction on the reporting of proceedings at the trial and that it is in the public interest to remove or relax the restriction, he or she shall direct that that subsection shall not apply to such matter relating to the girl or woman concerned as is specified in the direction; but a direction shall not be given in pursuance of this subsection by reason only of the outcome of the trial.

- (5) If a person who has been convicted of an offence and given notice of appeal against the conviction, or, on conviction on indictment, notice of an application for leave so to appeal, applies to the appellate court for a direction in pursuance of this subsection and satisfies the court—
- (a) that the direction is required for the purpose of obtaining evidence in support of the appeal, and
 - (b) that the applicant is likely to suffer injustice if the direction is not given,
- the court shall direct that subsection (1) shall not apply to such matter relating to the girl or woman concerned and the offence as is specified in the direction.
- (6) If any matter is published or broadcast in contravention of subsection (1), the following persons, namely—
- (a) in the case of a publication in a newspaper or periodical, any proprietor, any editor and any publisher of the newspaper or periodical,
 - (b) in the case of any other publication, the person who publishes it, and
 - (c) in the case of a broadcast, any body corporate which transmits or provides the programme in which the broadcast is made and any person having functions in relation to the programme corresponding to those of an editor of a newspaper,
- shall be guilty of an offence.
- (7) In this section—
- “broadcast” means broadcast by wireless telegraphy of sound or visual images intended for general reception;
- “written publication” includes a film, a sound track and any other record in permanent form but does not include an indictment or other document prepared for use in particular legal proceedings.
- (8) Nothing in this section—
- (a) prohibits the publication or broadcasting of matter consisting only of a report of legal proceedings other than proceedings at, or intended to lead to, or on an appeal arising out of, a trial at which the accused person is charged with an offence under this Act, or
 - (b) affects any prohibition or restriction imposed by virtue of any other enactment upon a publication or broadcast.
- (9) A direction in pursuance of this section does not affect the operation of subsection (1) at any time before the direction is given.
- (10) If, after the commencement of a trial of a person for an offence under this Act, a new trial of the person for that offence is ordered, the commencement of any previous trial of that person for that offence shall be disregarded for the purposes of subsections (2) and (3).

- (3) If, upon the trial on indictment of an arrestable offence, it is proved that the offence charged, or some other offence of which the accused might on that charge be found guilty, was committed but it is not proved that the accused was guilty of it, the accused may be found guilty of an offence under subsection (2) of which it is proved that he or she is guilty in relation to the offence charged, or that other offence.
- (4) A person committing an offence under subsection (2) with intent to impede another person's apprehension or prosecution shall be liable on conviction on indictment to imprisonment according to the gravity of the offence that the other person has committed or attempted to commit, as follows:

- (7) The First Schedule to the Criminal Justice Act, 1951 (which specifies the indictable offences which may be tried summarily with the consent of the accused) is hereby amended by the insertion of the following reference: "24. An offence under section 7(2) of the Criminal Law Act, 1997."

Criminal Justice (Withholding of Information on Offences Against Children and Vulnerable Persons) Act 2012

Section 2

- (1) Subject to this section, a person shall be guilty of an offence if—
- (a) he or she knows or believes that an offence, that is a Schedule 1 offence, has been committed by another person against a child, and
 - (b) he or she has information which he or she knows or believes might be of material assistance in securing the apprehension, prosecution or conviction of that other person for that offence,
- and fails without reasonable excuse to disclose that information as soon as it is practicable to do so to a member of the Garda Síochána.
- (2) Subsection (1) applies only to information that a person acquires, receives or becomes aware of after the passing of this Act irrespective of whether the Schedule 1 offence concerned was committed before or after that passing.
- (3) The child against whom the Schedule 1 offence concerned was committed (whether or not still a child) shall not be guilty of an offence under this section.

Please note that the use of a photograph of any girl or woman in this report does not imply that she has, nor has not, undergone FGM.

This report analyses and discusses the application of national (criminal) laws to the commission of FGM and any possible related crimes. It also explores other legal factors deemed relevant, such as legal obligations to report the commission or likely upcoming commission of FGM, available legal protective measures for girls and women at risk of FGM, and any obligations of national governments in relation to FGM.

The initial research conducted for this report consisted of a questionnaire developed by 28 Too Many and Ashurst LLP. The information contained in the responses to that questionnaire was then reviewed by Middelburg Human Rights Law Consultancy, updated and used as the basis of further research from relevant sources. This report is mainly based on primary legal sources such as legislation, case law and authoritative literature, but does use secondary sources such as government documents, journal articles and newspaper articles.

This report has been prepared as a work of legal research only and does not represent legal advice in respect of any of the laws of the Republic of Ireland.
