

THOMSON REUTERS
FOUNDATION

FGM...
let's end it.

SOMALIA: THE LAW AND FGM

July 2018

In Somalia, the prevalence of FGM in women aged 15–49 is 97.9%.

The central and southern regions of the country have the highest prevalence, at 99.2%.

- Most girls are cut between the ages of five and nine.
- Nearly 80% of women have undergone Type III ('sewn closed'/infibulation, also referred to in Somalia as 'Pharaonic Circumcision').
- FGM is usually performed by traditional practitioners.
- 64.5% of women aged 15–49 believe that FGM should continue.

Source of data: UNICEF and MICS (2006) Somalia: Multiple Index and Cluster Survey, p. 138. Available at https://mics-surveys-prod.s3.amazonaws.com/MICS3/Eastern%20and%20Southern%20Africa/Somalia/2006/Final/Somalia%202006%20MICS_English.pdf.

For further information on FGM in Somalia see <https://www.28toomany.org/somalia/>.

Domestic Legal Framework

Overview of Domestic Legal Framework in Somalia
The Constitution explicitly prohibits:
X	Violence against women and girls
X	Harmful practices
✓	Female genital mutilation (FGM)
National legislation:
X	Provides a clear definition of FGM
X	Criminalises the performance of FGM
X	Criminalises the procurement, arrangement and/or assistance of acts of FGM
X	Criminalises the failure to report incidents of FGM
X	Criminalises the participation of medical professionals in acts of FGM
X	Criminalises the practice of cross-border FGM
X*	Government has a strategy in place to end FGM

* The State Government of Puntland does, however, have a strategy to abandon FGM.

Jurisdictional Background

For the purposes of the legal analysis in this report, the Federal Republic of Somalia is taken to comprise five federal States, including Puntland, but excluding Somaliland. In 1991 Somaliland declared independence from Somalia. Somaliland has its own government, but its self-declared independence remains unrecognised by the United Nations, and Somalia continues to consider Somaliland as a federal member state. A separate Country Report titled 'Somaliland: The Law and FGM' can be found at www.28toomany.org/SomalilandFGMLaw.

In 1998 Puntland was declared an autonomous state of the Federal Republic of Somalia. While Somalia has only recently started to review the situation in relation to FGM across the country, Puntland has made more progress in recent years towards ending FGM and its law and strategies form part of this Country Report on Somalia.

What is The Law Against FGM?

An overview of the international and regional treaties signed and ratified by Somalia can be found in Appendix I of this report.

Somalia's legal system is a mixture of civil law, Islamic law and customary law (referred to as Xeer).

The Constitution of Somalia (2012)¹ states at Article 4, 'After the Shari'ah, the Constitution of the Federal Republic of Somalia is the supreme law of the country.' It protects human dignity and equality under Articles 10 and 11 respectively, and, most significantly in relation to FGM, sets out under Article 15(4) that:

*Circumcision of girls is a cruel and degrading customary practice, and is tantamount to torture.
The circumcision of girls is prohibited.*

Article 29(2) further provides, 'Every child² has the right to be protected from mistreatment, neglect, abuse or degradation.'

There is currently no national legislation in Somalia that expressly criminalises and punishes the practice of FGM.

The Penal Code, Law No. 05/1962³ (the Penal Code), which came into force on 2 April 1964, is applicable to all jurisdictions in Somalia (and Somaliland) and makes it a criminal offence to cause hurt to another that results in physical or mental illness.

In 2015, it was reported that work had begun to initiate a bill that would criminalise FGM across all of Somalia, and the Ministry of Women Affairs and Human Rights has declared its willingness to introduce FGM-eradication laws in Somalia; however, no specific bill has yet been proposed.⁴

Specifically, in Puntland, there is currently FGM legislation awaiting parliamentary approval⁵, and in 2016 the Sexual Offences Act was enacted, which demonstrates a commitment to addressing harmful practices.⁶ An Islamic ruling (fatwa) against FGM has also been signed in Puntland (see Relevant Government Authorities and Strategies below).

What The Law Covers

There is no definition of FGM in either the Constitution (in which it is referred to as 'circumcision of girls') or in the religious fatwa, which simply states that it 'bans all forms of female genital mutilation/cutting (FGM/C)'. There is no reference to whether the prohibitions cover only those who perform FGM, or if it could also include those who plan, procure, aid or assist acts of FGM, or who fail to report FGM that has already, or is due to, take place.

In the absence of national legislation prohibiting all forms of FGM, the Somali Penal Code makes it a criminal offence to cause hurt to another and sets out the associated punishments. Under Article 440(3), hurt is deemed 'very grievous' if it results in (b) 'loss of a sense' or (c) 'loss of a limb, or a mutilation which renders the limb useless, or the loss of the use of an organ or of the capacity to procreate.'

Medicalised FGM

The increase of medicalised FGM has been reported throughout Somalia, but there is no data available on the number of women and girls who have been cut by a health professional or in a medical setting. It is reported that increasing medicalisation in Somalia is a result of those families on higher incomes and with better education believing it will 'reduce the harm' of FGM.⁷ There is no legislation currently in place at the national level criminalising and punishing medicalisation of the practice.

In Puntland, an inter-ministerial decree against FGM developed by the Ministry of Health and signed in 2014 states that there will be no medicalisation of FGM⁸ and it has the authority to shut down clinics and hospitals that continue the practice, and arrest perpetrators. It also entitles the Government of Puntland to cancel the licences of medical professionals who practice FGM in their clinics, and doctors' associations have been asked to hold their members accountable for practising FGM by revoking their memberships. This inter-ministerial policy is now being disseminated by stakeholders, but currently it lacks an implementation plan and accountability framework.⁹

Cross-Border FGM

In some countries where FGM has become illegal, the practice has been pushed underground and across borders. Somalia shares borders with countries where the prevalence of FGM and the existence and enforcement of anti-FGM laws vary, including Ethiopia and Kenya.

There are many Somalis living in the border regions of Ethiopia and Kenya, and the absence of national legislation banning FGM in Somalia allows the practice to continue, as families move across borders to avoid prosecution. There is no accurate data on the number of girls who are taken across borders to be cut.

It is also suggested that many Somali women and girls from the Western diaspora (for example, in the USA, Australia, the UK and other European countries) are taken to Somalia for FGM because there is no risk of prosecution.

Penalties

There are currently no penalties set out in the law of Somalia for practising FGM.

Although the Constitution of Somalia prohibits FGM, there is no specific law or provision that establishes a punishment for breach of the Constitution. However, the Constitution provides for judicial review as a means to protect the supremacy of the Constitution and mandates the Human Rights Commission and Ombudsman to protect the Constitution.

Under Article 440(1) of the Penal Code, the penalty for causing hurt to another is imprisonment for three months to three years. Where the hurt is deemed to be 'grievous' (2), the penalty is imprisonment for three to seven years, rising to six to twelve years where the hurt is deemed to be 'very grievous' (3).

Implementation of The Law

Cases

In the absence of national legislation on FGM, there are no reported cases of arrest or court proceedings in Somalia. There is also no evidence of the Penal Code being used to prosecute perpetrators of FGM.

No cases have been identified as arising from the fatwa declared in Puntland, nor any instances of malpractice brought against a health professional for performing FGM. There have been instances where girls have bled to death or experienced adverse side effects following medicalised FGM, but it appears such cases were settled privately between the medical practitioner and the family, sometimes with the mediation of community elders. These cases are not reported publicly.

Relevant Government Authorities and Strategies

The leading government departments responsible for work to end FGM in Somalia are the Federal Ministry of Women and Human Rights Development (MOWHRD) in Central South and the Ministry of Women's Development and Family Affairs (MOWDAFA) in Puntland. In addition, across all zones, the Ministry for Religious Affairs and Endowment, Ministry of Health (MOH) and Ministry of Youth all contribute to the work to end FGM. Since 2015, the federal MOWHRD and the MOH have co-chaired an FGM taskforce meeting to coordinate anti-FGM work.¹⁰ It has not been possible, however, to obtain any details of a formal government strategy to end FGM across the whole of Somalia.

In 2009 Somalia became part of the UNFPA-UNICEF Joint Programme on Female Genital Mutilation/Cutting (UNJP). The UNJP works with government departments and a range of implementing partners at all levels to engage communities, develop communications strategies, provide protection and support services for women and girls affected by FGM and establish religious leaders' networks throughout the country. An integral part of the UNJP strategy is also to support Somali efforts to develop policy and anti-FGM legislation.

In March 2014, the President of Puntland approved an official government policy outlawing all forms of FGM. The policy aimed for 'total abandonment of FGM/C practices in the Puntland through effective Government FGM/C abandonment strategies and approaches for sustainable behaviour change at the family and at the society levels.'¹¹ The strategy in Puntland currently being disseminated by stakeholders includes generating reliable data on FGM, sensitising the community, working with religious leaders and health professionals, and utilising the media. However, there is no formal implementation plan as yet, and parliamentary legislation to support the work is still not in place.

Shortly before the Puntland policy was approved, In November 2013, 18 prominent religious leaders signed a fatwa (an Islamic law ruling) against FGM, which was witnessed by the then Puntland Minister of Justice, Religious Affairs and Rehabilitation, the Deputy Minister of Health and the Deputy Minister of Women and Family Social Affairs.¹² The fatwa had been drafted by a committee of seven members and justified the abandonment of all forms of FGM on health and religious grounds.¹³

In July 2014 both the Somalia and Puntland Governments signed the Girl Summit Charter on Ending FGM, Child, Early and Forced Marriage.¹⁴

Civil Society Observations

There is a network of NGOs in Somalia working with the Government and the UNJP to mobilise the community at the local level and implement the different strategies to end the practice. These efforts, however, still face many challenges and are not being fully supported because of the continued absence of national legislation banning FGM.

Challenges reported by civil society in Somalia include a continuing absence of accurate data on the prevalence of FGM, short-term and insecure funding, poor monitoring and evaluation of programmes and different understandings in Somalia of what FGM is. Regarding the latter, it is noted that FGM in Somalia is interpreted to be Type III ('Infibulation') or 'Pharaonic circumcision', whereas all other Types are referred to as 'Sunna', which people believe is sanctioned by Islam.¹⁵ Hence, any legislation requires clear definitions and understanding of all types of FGM.

Civil society continues to campaign hard for FGM to be banned in Somalia. In 2016 the prime minister was successfully lobbied by campaigners to sign a petition calling for the passing of a bill against FGM.¹⁶ Efforts continue to date to make this pledge into a reality.

Conclusions and Suggestions for Improvement

Conclusions

- FGM prevalence in Somalia remains the highest in the world and evidence suggests that there has been very little change over time. There is an absence of up-to-date, accurate data on the practice to inform policy and programmes.
- FGM is prohibited under the Somali Constitution, but the continuing lack of a national law criminalising and punishing all forms of FGM undermines the efforts of all parties working to end the practice within the country.
- Ending FGM in Somalia will continue to be a complex challenge, but the implementation of national legislation is a key part of the strategy; it will show the Government's commitment to protecting women and girls and eradicating the harmful practice.

Suggestions for Improvement

National Legislation

- There is an urgent need to adopt robust national policy and pass legislation in Somalia to protect women and girls, of all ages, from all types of FGM. Laws need to be drafted after full consultation with all members of society, and the Government should draw on the experience of other FGM-practising countries that have implemented legislation to ensure the content of the law is applicable and enforceable in the context of Somalia.
- The law requires clear definitions of all types of FGM practised across Somalia.
- The law needs to criminalise and punish all perpetrators of the practice (including those who perform, procure, aid or abet FGM). Instances of medicalised FGM and cross-border FGM need to be considered too.
- Addressing the failure to report FGM that is planned or has taken place is a further key consideration in protecting women and girls through national laws.
- The Government also has a responsibility to protect uncut women and girls (and their families) from verbal abuse, physical threats and exclusion from society. Such provisions are included in the laws of some other countries (for example, Uganda).
- Laws also need to protect all victims of FGM: women and girls who are pressured by society into agreeing to FGM should not be subject to prosecution and further punishment.
- The same provisions should be adopted in laws across all states and regions of Somalia.
- All relevant laws need to be made accessible to all members of society and easy to understand in all local languages.

Implementation of the Law

Once national legislation is in place prohibiting FGM, the following key actions will contribute to efforts to end the practice in Somalia:

- Anti-FGM programmes should disseminate clear, easy-to-understand and accurate information around the law.
- Judges and local law enforcers need adequate support and training around the law and should be encouraged to fully apply the sentences provided for by the legislation.
- Increased involvement of local and religious leaders in education around the law, including their responsibilities and the importance of the law in protecting women and girls in their communities, would also be beneficial.
- Adequate monitoring and reporting of FGM cases in Somalia would improve efficiency and inform policy makers, the judiciary, the police, civil society and all those working to implement and enforce the law.
- All professions (including those in health and education) need training around the law and their responsibilities to respond to women and girls who are affected by or at risk of FGM.
- Increased support and protection for victims and witnesses in FGM cases is essential.
- Tribunals could be encouraged to make sure any prosecutions relating to FGM are clearly reported, including through local media such as community radio, and made available in local languages.
- Where literacy rates are low, information around the law needs to be made available through different media channels and resources.
- Mandatory reporting of instances of FGM by medical staff in hospitals and health centres could be considered.
- Where these are currently unavailable and a need is identified, appropriate protection measures (for example, the provision of emergency telephone helplines or safe spaces) should be put in place for girls at risk of FGM.

Appendix I: International and Regional Treaties

SOMALIA	Signed	Ratified	Acceded	Reservations on reporting?
International
International Covenant on Civil & Political Rights (1966) (ICCPR)			✓ 1990
International Covenant on Economic, Social & Cultural Rights (1966) (ICESCR)			✓ 1990
Convention on the Elimination of All forms of Discrimination Against Women (1979) (CEDAW)				Not signed
Convention Against Torture & Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment (1984) (CTOCIDTP)			✓ 1990
Convention on the Rights of the Child (1989) (CRC)	✓ 2002	✓ 2015		Not bound by Articles 14, 20 and 21
Regional
African Charter on Human & Peoples' Rights (1981) (ACHPR) (Banjul Charter)	✓ 1982	✓ 1985
African Charter on the Rights and Welfare of the Child (1990) (ACRWC)	✓ 1991
African Charter on Human and Peoples' Rights on the Rights of the Women in Africa (2003) (ACHPRRWA) (Maputo Protocol)	✓ 2006

'Signed': a treaty is signed by countries following negotiation and agreement of its contents.

'Ratified': once signed, most treaties and conventions must be ratified (i.e. approved through the standard national legislative procedure) to be legally effective in that country.

'Acceded': when a country ratifies a treaty that has already been negotiated by other states.

- 1 Somalia's Constitution of 2012 (2012) Available at https://www.constituteproject.org/constitution/Somalia_2012.pdf.
- 2 Article 29 (8) of the Somali Constitution (2012) defines 'child' as any person under 18 years of age.
- 3 Penal Code: Legislative Decree No. 5 of 16 December 1962 (1962) Available at http://www.somalilandlaw.com/Penal_Code_English.pdf.
- 4 - Goobjoog News (2015) Somalia will soon ban FGM, Human Rights Minister says, 17 August. Available at <http://goobjoog.com/english/somalia-will-soon-ban-fgm-human-rights-minister-says/>.
- A. Abdirahman (2015) 'Somalia to introduce law prohibiting Female Genital Mutilation', Horseed Media, 3 August. Available at <https://horseedmedia.net/2015/08/03/somalia-to-introduce-law-prohibiting-female-genital-mutilation/>.
- 5 Abdirizak Shiino (2014) 'Somalia: Puntland bans Female Genital Mutilation (FGM)', Horseed Media, 11 March. Available at <https://horseedmedia.net/2014/03/11/puntland-bans-fgm/>.
- 6 United Nations Population Fund (2016) 'Puntland passes law against sexual offences', ReliefWeb, 5 September. Available at <https://reliefweb.int/report/somalia/puntland-passes-law-against-sexual-offences>.
- 7 Dr Sheena Crawford and Sagal Ali (2015) Situational Analysis of FGM/C Stakeholders and Interventions in Somalia. Available at <http://www.heart-resources.org/wp-content/uploads/2015/11/Situational-analysis-if-FGM-stakholders-and-interventions-somalia-UN.pdf>.
- 8 UNFPA-UNICEF Joint Programme to Eliminate Female Genital Mutilation (2017) 2016 Annual Report of the UNFPA-UNICEF Joint Programme on FGM/C: Accelerating Change, p.62. Available at https://reliefweb.int/sites/reliefweb.int/files/resources/UNFPA_UNICEF_FGM_16_Report_web.pdf.
- 9 Information supplied by the Population Council.
- 10 UNFPA-UNICEF Joint Programme to Eliminate Female Genital Mutilation, op. cit.
- 11 UNICEF Somalia (2014) Regional authority in Somalia introduces an official policy to end FGM/C. Available at https://www.unicef.org/somalia/reallives_14437.html.
- 12 UNICEF Somalia (2013) Important Religious Ruling against all forms of female circumcision signed in Puntland, North Eastern Somalia. Available at https://www.unicef.org/somalia/reallives_13980.html.
- 13 MOJ, MOFSA, MOH (undated) Religious Fatwa for Banning All Forms of FGM/C. Available at https://www.unicef.org/somalia/SOM_resources_fatwa.pdf.
- 14 Girl Summit 2014 (2014) The Girl Summit Charter on Ending FGM and Child, Early and Forced Marriage. Available at https://www.gov.uk/government/uploads/system/uploads/attachment_data/file/346027/GS-CharterEnglish.pdf.
- 15 Dr Sheena Crawford and Sagal Ali, op. cit.
- 16 BBC News (2016) Somalia Prime Minister Sharmarke backs anti-FGM campaign, 23 March. Available at <http://www.bbc.co.uk/news/world-africa-35882404>.

Cover image: Oxfam East Africa (2010) Asha, 30 – 'To solve Somalia's problems, Somali people must lead the way.' Creative Commons Attribution 2.0 Generic lic.

Please note that the use of a photograph of any girl or woman in this report does not imply that she has, nor has not, undergone FGM.

This report was prepared in collaboration with TrustLaw, the Thomson Reuters Foundation's global, legal pro bono service that connects law firms and legal teams to NGOs and social enterprises that are working to create social and environmental change.

The information in this report has been compiled in cooperation with Latham & Watkins from documents that are publicly available and is for general information purposes only. It has been prepared as a work of legal research only and does not represent legal advice in respect of any of the laws of Somalia. It does not purport to be complete or to apply to any particular factual or legal circumstances. It does not constitute, and must not be relied or acted upon as, legal advice or create an attorney-client relationship with any person or entity. Neither 28 Too Many, Latham & Watkins, the Thomson Reuters Foundation nor any other contributor to this report accepts responsibility for losses that may arise from reliance upon the information contained herein, or any inaccuracies, including changes in the law since the research was completed in July 2018. No contributor to this report holds himself or herself out as being qualified to provide legal advice in respect of any jurisdiction as a result of his or her participation in this project or contribution to this report. Legal advice should be obtained from legal counsel qualified in the relevant jurisdiction/s when dealing with specific circumstances. It should be noted, furthermore, that in many countries there is a lack of legal precedent for the penalties laid out in the law, meaning that, in practice, lesser penalties may be applied.

Acknowledgements:

Latham & Watkins
Population Council

